

KALLIOPE JONES

Kalliope Jones (Isabella DeHerdt, Wes Chalfant, and Alouette Batteau) is a post-rock power trio from Western Massachusetts. Originally a folk-rock group, Kalliope Jones has developed its soundscape to bend gender-genre-genius from r&b, pop punk, and alt indie. Kalliope Jones weaves three unique songwriting styles into a fusion that fabricates the fibers of cosmological being. Through confession and collaboration, the band has made its way to the Falcon Ridge Folk Festival, the Iron Horse Music Hall, the Wolfrap Center for Performing Arts, Club Passim, and most recently, Dar Williams' River Roads Festival, where Kalliope Jones played alongside the likes of Amy Ray, Shawn Colvin, and Lisa Loeb. Kalliope Jones has been sonically compared to Annie DiRusso, HAIM, and boygenius. At 22, 22, and 24, Kalliope Jones' ever-heightening anti-solipsistic sophistication is representative of wisdom beyond their years and no sign of slowing down.
